EUROPEAN RESORTS.

Peculiar Draw, Which Seems to Be Against the Ethics of the Game-Londen and Brooklyn Cable Match Preparations-Practice Games Arranged.

Frank J. Marshall, with a clean score of ten wirs and two draws, won the annual championship of the Manhattan Chess no and thereby once more demonstrated his superiority over most of the active players of the club. As was stated last sunday, Marshall in order to win the tourney had to at least draw with Paul Johner in the final game, which was scheduled for last Sunday, and from the score of this game it will be seen that Marshall had an asy win, the position when Johner offered a draw being as follows:

Black-Marshall.

After Johner, whose turn it was to move had studied the position for a considerable time he offered a draw, and Marshall, only needing a draw to win the championship, at once accepted that offer. Opinions about the correctness of such termination of a game greatly differ.

From a purely business point of view the is perfectly correct, but some of tators who saw the finale maintained that such action of two players, the one to offer a draw when the game is practically lost to him and the other accepting a draw without at least demand-ing of his adversary to make another move, is against all ethics of the game. In fact they assert, such a thing could not occur in any international event of importance because all the players are pledged by the rules to play one and all of their games to the best of their ability, and because the issue of each game generally affect other competitors.

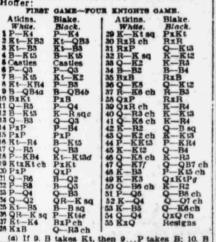

In this instance this was not the case inasmuch as Johner was sure of the secon prize independent of drawing or losing the game. However, as a matter of principle and from a purely chess point of view, not taking business into consider ation. Johner should not have offered draw when he must have seen that he has a lost game in hand, and Marshall shoul not have accepted the offer, for when the prizes were not offered just for the of disposing of them, but to get the possible chess the competitors were to play and thereby derive instruction and pleasure.

Moreover, what will a chess critic think of Marshall if he happens to see the score of this game without the printed notice thereto: "Marshall had only to draw to win the first prize"? He will find it incomprehensible why the game was declared a draw when a win was so clearly in sight.

From the appended game it will be seen that Marshall played an excellent defence, and a very interesting game was played until Johner committed that error of judgment of giving up a piece, which practically left him at the mercy of his adversary. The game: QUEEN'S PAWN OPENING

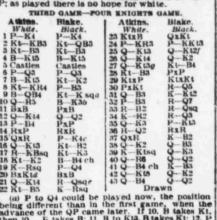

(a) If 9. B takes Kt, then 9... P takes B: 10. B takes Kt, Q takes B: 11. Kt to Q5, Q takes Kt; 12. Kt takes B. P to B4; 13. P to KB 3, B to K3, with a attack.

(e) There is nothing in 25... Q to R5, because of 27. P to Ktå, and nothing comes of the sacrifice of the bishop. But he might have removed Q to Kt2, so as to retain the two bishops in the hope of perhaps remaining with bishops of different color eventually.

(f) Atkins wrote this move down in his score as 'check,' and was quite surprised to find that it was not so. It might have had more serious consequences.

THE CHESS PLAYERS' CORNER S. 9 to BZ. &c. T. P takes Kt; and if 7... P to Q5: tions should be addressed to the secretary Paul J. Engel, Jr. (c) A losing variation. There is nothing better than 5, Kt to B2; but even so white has at the MANHATTAN C. p; as played there is no hope for white.

(f) 17.25... Q to K14 then 28. R to B7, and 17.25... Kt to K14, then 28. Q to R4.

(g) Practically offering a draw, which might have been accepted. There is nothing else in it. (g) Practically offering a draw, which might have been accepted. There is nothing else in it.

When Harvard and Yale tried to break the tie which arose in the last intercollegiate tourney played in this city in the last week in December, they contested two games, leaving both of these games unfinished, and when the adjudicators, Julius Finn and Hermann Helms, got to work at these positions they found a hard nut to crack. They tried to agree upon a verdict and up to date have failed to find a win in either game. In handing in the verdict they will recommend to the committee in charge of these tournaments the adoption of a rule to make such adjudication almost an impossibility by ordering a longer time for play or making the time limit faster. Games should not be won by the adjudicators but by the players, and it seems most unfair to a player who gets a game adjudicated against him by the referees when his opponent could never have found a win over the board himself. Here are the scores of these games:

The committee in charge of the forthconing cable chess match with Great Britain is doing its utmost to secure the best possible team to represent this country and thus if possible retrieve the laurels
and the $1,000 trophy donated by Sir George Newnes of London. The committee has not only been trying hard to get the cooperation of the top men such as Marshall, Hodges, Barry, Voigt, Stadelmann and others and get their promise to play again this year, but also succeeded in getting a number of
"coits" to actually contest a series of games in order to get at their real strength and abilities. Among the latter class R. T.
Black, F. F. Russell. L. B. Meyer and
A. F. Kreymborg have accepted the invitation of the cable committee and are Brooklan Chess Club and allow all the Brooklyn Chess Club and allow all recognized cable team players together with all the "probables" and "possibles"
to enter for the purpose of giving all round practice to everybody and also make it acomparatively easy job to finally select the team, which is to be composed of ten British players that practice. J. H. Black, the present leader in that contest, is engaged in a match with H. E. Atkins, the British players that practice.

J. H. Black, the present leader in that contest, is engaged in a match with H. E. Atkins, the British amateur champion, a contest now two games, one being drawn. These games will prove of special interest to American players in view of the coming cable match, as both these experts are sure to play for Great Britain. The games, with notes by L.
